

While the middle class feels the squeeze and the rich get richer, growing inequality hurts our economy. More than 25 years after Parliament voted to end child poverty, it's grown worse, with 13.3 per cent of children living in poverty.

Strong unions reduce inequality by bargaining better wages and benefits that help workers and communities. Unions advocate for higher minimum wages and affordable childcare.

Only Tom Mulcair and the NDP will address growing inequality by closing tax loopholes for CEOs and using the proceeds to end child poverty.
